Graeme Lempriere, Chief Executive Officer, states:

"Commercial farming is the bedrock to our ability to feed the world. We have dedicated ourselves to the farming community by creating game changing solutions which will sustainably boost crop production and reduce costs while supporting population growth amid climate change. As input costs soar and environmental challenges mount, we believe sharing our objectives through the production of this documentary provides an effective communication medium to an audience that reaches beyond the farm.

It was a true pleasure working with all the individuals and organizations involved that supported Earth on the Edge: Save our Soils. This project is a true reflection of industry stakeholders and the diverse conversations that share a common thread and motivation to drive the development and implementation of revolutionary advancements in agriculture that will benefit generations to come. A special thank you to Matt Gillespie of Joe Media Group for your dedication to our message."
